PART IV.

SCIENTIFIC AIDS TO CRIME DETECTION.

'The Technical Bureau, staffed by experienced members who have had technical training, affords scientific aid to Gárdaí throughout the country, and gives instruction and practical demonstrations in modern methods of criminal investigation to other members of the Force, particularly to recruits in training.

The Bureau is divided into six sub-sections, viz. :

(1)	Investigation.	(4)	Mapping.
(2)	Fingerprints and		Ballistics.
	Criminal Records.	(6)	Radio.
(3)	Photography.	1000

The following work was carried out by the specialised subsections during the year.

The figures at 2 above (number of sets of fingerprints received for search) show an increase of $8\frac{3}{4}\%$ on those for the year 1956 and an increase of 23% on the 1955 figures.

There is also a marked increase at 6 above (number of cases in which articles were received for examination). It represents 26% over 1956 and 76% over 1955, with a corresponding increase in the number of culprits identified.

The fingerprint collection in this office has now been divided into two sections, viz. :-

(a) Persons of 60 years and under.

(b) Persons over 60 years.

It is intended that criminal records of persons over 75 years who have not been convicted for 15 years be segregated for destruction.

(2) Photography.

The general work of the Photographic sub-section proceeded as in previous years. Official photographs prepared for court presentation and general police purposes were as follows:—

(i) Total number of photographs prepared ... 7,181

(ii) Total number of photostatic copies ... 219 Specialist photographic work was also carried out for other

Specialist photographic work was also carried out for other State Departments including the Central Bank and Chief State Solicitor.

Members visited the scenes of 391 crimes, attended 166 courts, 6 inquests and 4 conferences during the year.

(3) MAPPING.

The scenes of 164 crimes were visited by members of the Mapping sub-section during the year—123 courts were attended and 841 maps prepared.

(4) Ballistics.

In addition to the examination and comparison of firearms and ammunition this sub-section undertakes the examination of exhibits such as glass fragments, cutting instruments, marks on woodwork, etc. They also attend to the restoration of defaced numbers on motor vehicles and pedal cycles.

During the year members attended 44 scenes of crime, 61 courts, 6 conferences, 3 inquests and examined 62 firearms (exhibits), 2,995 bullets and cartridge cases, 15 cycles, 235 official firearms (for repairs).

Interesting Cases.

A quantity of lead was stolen from the roof of a city factory. Characteristic marks on the stolen lead corresponded with marks found on the pitch base from which it was removed. A conviction resulted. A large quantity of copper and lead piping was stolen from an unoccupied house. Microscopic examination of the recovered piping identified it as having originally been part of the pipes of this house from which it had been severed by the culprit. The accused was convicted.

In a hit and run motor accident pieces of glass recovered from the scene and the route taken by the suspect car were identified with minute fragments of glass from the head-lamp. The physical fitting of the pieces formed the greater portion of a headlamp glass.

During the year a number of motor cycles were stolen in Dublin. The original engine and frame numbers of these machines were filled in with a metal composition and the surface of the metal polished. New numbers were stamped on the composition. Careful removal of this alloy revealed the original numbers. A conviction resulted.

In a case of forgery of one pound Irish currency notes a search of a suspect's premises revealed materials for forging notes, Post Office money orders, advice forms and petrol coupons. The forgeries were being made by photography and a silk screen process which is a comparatively new process in this country. Technical evidence was given in court regarding the working of this process and of the various uses to which the exhibits found in the suspect's house could be put. A conviction resulted.

(5) RADIO.

The V.H.F. radio equipment, aided by the "999" telephone call system has continued to give satisfactory service during the year. Some extensions to the service were made by fitting additional station sets and car sets.

15,505 "999" calls were received during the year resulting in the arrest of 565 offenders. It was noted that there was a greater tendency on the part of the public to avail of this service.

Car patrols in the Dublin city area were responsible for making offenders amenable for offences such as:—

(a)	Housebreaking		370
(6)	Theft of motor vehicles		33
(c)	Street disorders, assaults		232
(d)	Other offences		407
