6. Community Engagement

To build a Garda service that reflects the needs and priorities of the people of Ireland.

Foreword

This is the 2007 Policing Plan for the Dublin Metropolitan Region Southern Division. It is aligned with the Garda Síochána Corporate Strategy 2007 to 2009 and with the National Policing Plan of the Garda Síochána for 2007.

The 2007 plan is, I believe, both challenging and realistic. It will offer to and assure the customer of a high standard of service quality, professionalism and commitment. It will provide members of the Garda Síochána with a focus and a guide for their activities.

During 2007, I aim to build on the successes of 2006; a year in which headline crime in the Division dropped by 12% due to ongoing effort and dedication on the part of all Gardaí in the Division.

This plan was developed following trend analysis, performance review and consultation and collaboration with various stakeholders and interest groups within the D.M.R Southern Division. A feature of modern policing is its identification as a key public service and its growing relationships with other public services.

The policing of our society is best achieved through a partnership process involving the Garda Síochána and the democratically elected representatives of the communities which the Garda Síochána serves, and with the participation of the community and voluntary sector. Each of these partners has its own distinctive perspective and inputs to offer.

This is essential for effective, efficient and accountable policing. Our policing strategy will adopt a community engagement and problem solving approach through community policing thereby empowering local communities.

I will utilise the plan to monitor policing progress during 2007 and I will adjust local policing strategies, as necessary, in light of quarterly assessments of this policing plan and in response to emergent issues. I will welcome your feedback during the year.
