Joint Strategy on the Management of Offenders

2016 - 2018

September 2016

INTRODUCTION

The Review Group on Penal Policy report, published in 2014, noted that “The experience of many jurisdictions is that penal policy (and by extension penal practice) is best created in an environment which prioritises inter-agency cooperation, is based on evidence, involves appropriate deliberation and the input of experts, which is conducted in a responsible and measured way, and which keeps the long-term purposes of the criminal justice system in its focus”. The management and rehabilitation of offenders is a common pursuit of agencies in the Criminal Justice System. The Probation Service, the Irish Prison Service and An Garda Síochána recognise that in our contributions to the maintenance of public protection and the reduction of victimisation in Irish society, a joint approach to areas of our work is vital. The Department of Justice and Equality is fully committed to supporting this joint approach.

There has been considerable cooperation and collaboration between the Irish Prison Service, the Probation Service and An Garda Síochána in recent years and this Strategy seeks to build on this work. The development of more efficient and effective services requires us to develop and build on existing multi-agency responses to those who are convicted and sentenced in our Courts. Sadly, one of the strongest predictors of future criminal behaviour is past criminal behaviour. Assistance in breaking this cycle is greatly enhanced when all agencies work together and communicate with each other. Collectively we acknowledge that encouraging the development of multi-agency problem solving approaches, including as part of the work of the Criminal Justice Strategic Committee, will assist us in fulfilling our respective mandates on behalf of the people of Ireland.
